

Martin Haberman, Distinguished Professor of Education at the University of Wisconsin—Milwaukee, Kappa Delta Pi Laureate, and author of the acclaimed Star Teachers of Children in Poverty, continues his efforts to improve inner-city schools with this study of the traits of “Star Principals.” Having informed principals of the traits to seek in prospective teachers, Dr. Haberman now offers this compelling study of traits that comprise successful principalship. This book offers vital information for school district administrators, principals, and teachers committed to urban students’ learning success.
