

Martin Haberman, Distinguished Professor of Education at the University of Wisconsin—Milwaukee and Laureate of Kappa Delta Pi, has made it his life's work to study what makes some teachers successful with students and what makes others fail. From extensive research in schools—and results from the widely used Haberman Urban Teacher Interview—Dr. Haberman shares composites from more than 1,000 interviews in Star Teachers to illustrate how star teachers think and behave differently from those who fail with students or quit the profession, providing a guide to effective action for those committed to students' successful learning through teaching excellence.
